Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA)

Nilan Johnson Lewis handles workplace safety and health matters for numerous employers in various industries, including manufacturing and electrical utilities. Our team offers a range of OSHA-related services, including:

- Training and compliance advice in regard to OSHA's recordkeeping and reporting requirements;
- Compliance advice for the general duty clause requirements, industry and hazard specific standards, and multiemployer situations;
- Responding to, advising on, and handling OSHA inspections, including attendance at opening and closing conferences, managing all requests for documents and interviews, and preparing for and defending management-level and non-management-level employee interviews;
- Contesting and negotiating general duty and industry specific citations to obtain rescission of the citation, reduction in the proposed penalties, and/or favorable changes to the citation language;
- Litigating administrative proceedings;
- Defending against enforcement actions;
- Defending against OSHA retaliation claims; and
- Consulting related to company safety policies and programs.
