This includes pursuing infringement claims in federal and state courts, as well as before the USPTO. We also act as local counsel in IP disputes. We offer a full range of services to resolve IP disputes efficiently, including early case assessments, drafting cease-and-desist letters, negotiating settlements, and, if necessary, strong courtroom representation. We have a track record of success in representing both defendants and plaintiffs in trademark infringement and dilution, copyright infringement, unfair competition, and trade secret disputes. Representative Successes

- Software Copyright Defense: We represented an airplane parts manufacturer in a copyright lawsuit over custom software programs. Through strategic litigation and negotiation, we secured a favorable settlement for less than the initial pre-suit offer.

- Medical Software Ownership: We helped a medical services provider in a dispute with a software development company that alleged infringement of its software copyrights against our client. By filing a declaratory judgment action, we secured a favorable settlement that definitively determined our client's ownership of its software.

- Trademark Protection for Educational Non-Profit: We represented a non-profit, member-based, educational provider in a trademark dispute with a public university. The university was using our client's trademark in conjunction with a professional development seminar. We successfully obtained a resolution where the university ceased the alleged infringement and changed the name of its seminar.

- Trademark Protection for Educational Materials: We represented a non-profit, member-based, educational provider in a separate trademark dispute. This time, the infringement came from a publisher and author who published a book with a title substantially similar to our client's training manual series. We achieved a successful outcome where the publisher and author agreed to change the name of their book.
